

League Unlikely To Put Limit on Monroe Doctrine

Amendments Committee Reports Adversely On The Question

CHINA LOSES A POINT

Wanted Limitation in Order To Balk Japan's Aggressions

GENEVA, Oct. 1—The amendments committee reported to the League of Nations Assembly today recommending that no change be made in Article 21 of the League covenant dealing with the Monroe Doctrine.

China had been making every possible effort to put limits to the Monroe Doctrine, and thus prevent the League from recognizing Japan's position in China.

China feared that Japan would set up the claim to "Monroe Doctrine rights" in the Far East upon the basis of existing treaties and agreements.

The amendments committee postponed action on Article 10, pledging the members of the League to guarantee the existing boundaries of the member states. Canada has been making a strong fight to have article 10 eliminated from the covenant and the Canadians opposed the suggestion that an interpretative resolution be adopted to explain the article in question.

A resolution which was interpreted by some of the delegates as an attempt to question the international validity of the Monroe Doctrine because it was not negotiated under the auspices of the League, was proposed to the Assembly by those amendment committees. The resolution which was one of the most sensational of the present meeting, was drafted by Senator Andrade, of Portugal, and was said to have the support of certain South American states that are opposed to the Monroe Doctrine.

The resolution first states that the "Understandings mentioned in article 21 may be considered in the nature of contributing to the progress of the League in the way of political realizations." It added:

"Such agreements should be negotiated under the auspices of the League of Nations for example, in special conferences with the League's assistance."

A persistent rumor was current that this resolution was aimed at the Monroe Doctrine and might be interpreted as a declaration that the League does not recognize the Monroe Doctrine because it was not effected under the auspices of the League. However, no delegate could be found who would put this interpretation upon it for public circulation. Senator Andrade himself was equally reticent. Asked the exact meaning of the resolution the Portuguese delegate replied:

"It speaks for itself. That is all I can say."

Dr. Urrutik, of Columbia, suggested that further discussions be adjourned until next year.

C. J. Doherty, head of the Canadian delegation, asked time to consider the matter.

Dr. Wang Hui, of the Chinese delegation, declared that, if the expression "regional understandings" be retained in article 21, the provision should be added that these "understandings" should not prejudice the rights of nations which are not parties to the "understandings." China, by this contention, hoped to make the expression worthless in so far as Japanese agreements with other powers were concerned to which China was not a concerned party.

Other members of the amendments committee argued that it would be dangerous to revise article 21 saying that the point raised by China was already covered by the covenant.

Fire Carry Night Club Tenants Down Ladders

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—Flames in the wake of a mysterious explosion swept through the two upper floors of a five story apartment house on East 113th street with such rapidity early today that firemen and policemen encountered great difficulty in carrying many of the scantily-clad tenants down the ladders. No one was injured.

Several of the tenants among the ten families in the building told of having heard a loud explosion just before the fire. Many of the tenants were terror-stricken when they opened their doors and found the hallways filled with smoke.

Marines Holding Fall Manoeuvres Near Fredericksburg

The above illustration should recall to the memory of many veterans of the World War experiences which they went through a few years ago. The photographs were made near Fredericksburg, Virginia, where the United States Marines are going through their Fall maneuvers. General Butler is in command of the 5,000 "Devil Dogs" encamped. The photographs show the Marines arriving at camp and their little city of "pup" tents, erected shortly afterwards. Below is a field wireless operator keeping tabs on the movement of the army.

Foreign Loans Not Considered Relevant

Administration Opposed to Injection Into Disarmament Conference

IS BESIDE THE ISSUE

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—The administration is distinctly opposed to having the forthcoming conference on limitation of armament take up the adjustment of foreign loans.

While, generally speaking, the United States is willing to discuss any question which has a bearing on armament and international peace and stability, the highest officials of the administration feel that it would be a mistake to introduce such a momentous issue into the program of a conference that was called primarily to limit armament and settle disputed questions in the Pacific.

No official would speak for publication on the matter today, but it was made plain that the United States looks with distinct disfavor on the agitation now being conducted in certain quarters abroad to bring up the question of indebtedness next November.

It is the opinion of officials here that the conference will have its hands full in dealing with an armament limitation and settling the controversial questions of the Pacific without undertaking the settlement of such a colossal matter as the foreign loans.

"The Administration feel" said one high official "that the introduction of the foreign loan issue would be bringing extraneous matter into the conference which might endanger the success of the efforts to reach an understanding on armament and the Far East."

Three of the countries to be represented at the conference owe the United States approximately $9,000,000,000. Great Britain owes $4,000,000,000. France $3,000,000,000 and Italy $2,000,000,000.

Officials declined to comment on possibility of a financial conference to immediately follow the conference on armament which is being proposed abroad as an alternative to the plan to have the armament conference deal with the question.

Attention was called to the fact that the Penrose bill, granting the secretary of the treasury practically unlimited authority to arrange settlement of the loans is now before the senate with little likelihood of it being passed. Until Congress gives the administration some grant of authority to negotiate a settlement, the administration can do little, it was said, to broach the question of payment to the debtor nations.

Price Ascendancy in Leading Commodities Indicates Boom

Federal Reserve Board Puts Out Report Revealing Unquestioned Soundness In Trade Fundamentals.

BY W. H. ATKINS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Boom times are ahead. Price ascendancy in leading commodity groups spell a return to prosperity.

The Federal Reserve Board, usually staid and conservative in its predictions, today came forward with the most optimistic forecast yet ventured from any official quarter over the business outlook. The board's gauge of the commercial pulse reveals unquestioned soundness in the fundamentals of the nation's trade.

Buying power of the people is now being exerted in heavy volume, as prices of leading staples begin to mount upward in a manner that has all the earmarks of permanency. The rise in prices in cotton, and in some of the grain groups, is not the result of artificial stimulus, the board finds, but is the result of the old law of supply and demand.

The board, in brief, concludes that America, the storehouse of the world, at this time, and the world's principal banker, holds the key to its own prosperity, despite the economic pitfalls abroad. The conclusion is strong that America is driving ahead despite these handicaps, which, for a time, held nothing but pessimism for American interests.

Reports of reserve bank directors, summarized by the board, show clearly that the rising cotton prices, and the increase in quotations for other agricultural products, have led to a rush of orders upon wholesalers and retailers alike, and that mills and factories, so long idle or working on part time are starting to speed up.

In the cotton price rise, nearly $1,000,000,000 more cash has gone into the pockets of the cotton producers of the south and southwest, and this swelling of credit resources has brought a demand from those sections in all parts of the north and west for commodities common to those sections, and generally has stimulated business.

Government financing of the agricultural and railroad industries is held responsible for the spurt in activity. This financing has only started. Such operations upon a much larger scale, within the next three months, indicate that the present favorable business factors in evidence are to be sustained in full measure.

Bristol People Attend Ceremony at Historic Spot

There was quite a Bristol delegation attending the ceremonies incident to the point where General Washington Crossing Park and Inn today. Many of them went by auto.

The park reservation, purchased by state legislative authorization, marks the point where General Washington made his famous strategic crossing in the Revolutionary War.

The exercises opened with a flag raising followed by a meeting of the Bucks County Historical Society, and the reading of an historical paper by Warren S. Ely. Judge John M. Patterson, Harman Yerkes and Samuel C. Eastburn spoke.

Autos Collide On Beaver Street

Injury to both drivers was narrowly averted when a light road truck driven by Street Commissioner A. M. Shores was hit by a heavier truck driven by Domick Rago, contractor of Mansion street, this morning, at Beaver and Garden streets. Commissioner Shores was coming south on Beaver street and Rago was coming north. The latter tried to turn into Garden street and hit the front of Shores' car smashing the radiator and breaking the front axle.

Jobs Bereave Ledoux Of His "Human Documents"

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Urban Ledoux was a shepherd without a flock today. The thirty-odd "human documents" of unemployment, exhibited by Ledoux to the national unemployment conference, have all got jobs. They are leaving today for the far stretches of North Dakota, full fed, after sleeping in a bed last night. There is also a jingle of coin in their pockets.

"Get 'em to North Dakota and I'll see that they get work," said W. L. Burdick, the only farmer representative in the conference.

"How can I get them there?" countered Ledoux.

"We can arrange that," spoke up Clarence Mott Woolley, of Detroit, president of the American Radiator Co. A hat was passed.

Woolley threw in $100. Eugene Meyer, of the War Finance Corporation, dug up $50; Otto Malley, of Philadelphia $40, and the sum was soon raised.

Ledoux will shepherd his charges to the Union Station today and to the Union Station today and place them on a west bound train.

He said he would bring fifty more "human documents" from New York tomorrow.

President Off To Witness U. S. Marines' Manoeuvres

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—President Harding, accompanied by Mrs. Harding and a party of guests, left Washington this morning for Fredericksburg, Va., where they will witness the "Battle of the Wilderness" conducted by the United States Marines.

Mgr. Crane Confirms Children of St. Ann's

Class of More Than 200 Receive Rite at Italian Church

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

More than two hundred children of St. Ann's Italian Roman Catholic Parish received confirmation this afternoon. Monsignor Michael J. Crane, Auxiliary Bishop of Philadelphia, officiated at the ceremony of the laying on of hands. The rite of confirmation is administered once in every two years in St. Ann's Parish.

The Papal Benediction, which was given Rev. Isadore Jenne, rector of St. Ann's by the Pope himself during Father Jenne's recent sojourn in Rome, will be bestowed upon the congregation of St. Ann's at the 10.30 A. M. mass tomorrow. A plenary indulgence is granted to all Catholics who attend the services at St. Ann's tomorrow. The Feast of St. Michael, who is the patron saint of many of the people of St. Ann's will be observed tomorrow. Many of the people of St. Ann's come from a town in Italy named for St. Michael.

Rev. Fathers Bernard Chleca and Marcellino Romagnolo, who recently returned from Rome with Father Jenne, will supervise the opening of Holy Trinity College on the James Gallagher farm at Emile, which their Order recently bought. In this institution, young men will be taught for the missionary priesthood, to work especially among the Italian people of the United States.

The teaching Sisters of the Holy Trinity Order, in charge of St. Ann's Parochial School on Jefferson avenue, will hold a reception of novices during the early part of October, in the convent adjoining the school.

Great preparations are being made by the congregation of Zion Lutheran Church, Jefferson Avenue and Wood street, for Rally Day, which will be held next Sunday, October 9th.

Tomorrow, the pastor, the Rev. T. Bahn Thomas, will preach in the morning on "Heart Searchings" and in the evening on "Lamps Going Out" Sunday School will be held at 9.30 A. M.

An important date at Zion church is the sater krout supper, to be given on October 22nd.

The celebration of Rosh Hoshanna, the Jewish New Year, begins tomorrow at sunset and continues until Tuesday night. The sacred anniversary will be observed by the Jewish colony of Bristol in the manner of their ancient faith.

Services in the Synagogue on Pond street will inaugurate this holy time of prayer and will be continued, morning, noon and night, Monday and Tuesday closing with the reciting of anthems by Rabbi Barron and the congregation.

In accordance with the tenets of Jewish Scripture, the New York observance is a time all Hebrews devote to prayer, and rest from all servile work. During this period, stores conducted by members of the Jewish faith in Bristol, will be closed all day Monday and Tuesday, opening with the closing of services at 6 P. M. Tuesday.

Virginia Man Hunt Ends In Capture Of Negro

NEWPORT NEWS, VA., Oct. 1—Carl Meskins, the negro slayer of Patrolman "Bob" Dekerte, is lodged in the city jail here today after the biggest man-hunt ever conducted in this part of Virginia.

For a week the negro has been sought by posses that numbered at times more than a thousand men. Police, county officials, citizens and Ku Klux Klansmen co-operated in the hunt.

Meekins was captured in New Kent county at the home of a friend. The county officers surrounded the house and demanded that Meekins come out. He came forth with his hands in the air.

He confessed last night to the police that he killed Dekerte with the officers own gun.

Local Gunners Sorry

Bristol sportsman who affect the shotgun are expressing sorrow that through a late enactment of the state legislature, the squirrel did not become game for them today, as he has hitherto done, but has a respite until the first of next month.

Twelve Families Remain As Problem at Townsite On the Eviction Date

Winter's Air Boat Damaged by Storm

Hurricane Tore it Loose From Moorings and Left it Overturned

TOWN TREES SUFFERED

The hurricane-like storm of yesterday afternoon did a lot of minor damage in Bristol, and adjacent territory, including the destruction of trees and late crops.

The most spectacular damage it did was the partial demolition of Clarence Winter's hydro aeroplane. The flying boat was overturned bodily by the gale which swept up the river, and both its wings were broken. It will not fly for some time, until Mr. Winter secures the parts to replace those broken and otherwise damaged. He expects to be able to get these parts at the U. S. Naval Air factory at League Island, where he purchased the plane. The parts are probably carried in stock there, but, if they are not, he will have to procure them from the Curtiss Flying Boat factory, at Ithaca New York.

The flying boat was anchored in what is known as "The Marsh", below Bristol, in the direction of Maple Beach and just off the canal basin.

Having no hangar accommodations for his aircraft, Mr. Winter has been tying her ropes and fastening her with anchors, securely enough to weather any ordinary blast, but not yesterday's hurricane.

The wind came roaring up the Delaware from the southward, and when the first blast hit the air craft, she shivered and showed signs of leaving her moorings. When the wind set in to blow in earnest, the airboat soon broke its ropes and was blown about twenty-five or fifty feet in the air. It was carried some distance and all bottom side up in the marsh. Both wings were broken.

Thomas Harrison, a Radcliffe street friend of the flying boat's owner was coming along in a canoe just about the time the storm started and perceived that the aircraft was in danger of slipping its moorings. He endeavored to fasten them more securely, but was unable to do so, and had to seek safety when the boat broke loose.

Marie Brennan Given Surprise By Her Friends

A surprise party was given Miss Marie Brennan in honor of her sixteenth birthday, on Thursday evening at her home, 227 Jefferson avenue.

The house was tastefully decorated in pink and blue, with flowers in all the rooms.

The evening's diversion consisted of games and dancing. Miss Anna Ulrick rendered a number of piano selections. Prizes were awarded to Miss Mae Slater, Alda Phelps, George Gushu and William Fine.

Refreshments were served in the dining room. The table was adorned by a large chocolate birthday cake, baked by Mrs. Kervick of Harriman.

Those present were Anna Ulrick and Frances Ulrick of Harriman; Alda Phelps and Charles Phelps of Edgely; Alice McCue, of Newportville; Alice R. Gallagher, Agnes Larriesse, Florence McCarry, Elizabeth Gaffney, Alice V. Gallagher, Honor Barrett, Margaret White, Mae Slater, Edward McIlvain, Eugene Barrett, William White, William Fine, James Wade, James Fox, Melvin Johnson, Bud Townsend, James Sackville, Joseph Ennis, Louis Taylor, John McGinley, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Brady, Miss M. Skehan, Mr. F. Rapp, Miss Mary Brady, Miss Sadie Brennan, Miss Marie Brennan, all of Bristol, George Gushu, of Tullytown, Mr. and Mrs. A. Kervick and Mrs. A. Ulrick of Harriman.

The guests departed at a late hour, after presenting their hostess with many beautiful gifts and wishing her many happy returns of the day.

Brings Load of Juley Oysters

Bristolians who like fresh oysters can be seen trooping to Market street wharf early on Thursday mornings, to buy the bivalves from an oyster boat which puts in there on that day. The boat makes the run from Maurice River. Chief of Police Sackville, who was an early customer last Thursday, is still smacking his lips over the recollection of the juicy "cooves" he secured and which made his evening meal. The boat has been coming here for several years.

One week after celebrating her nine ty-eighth birthday, Mrs. Joanna Wise Gettysburgh's oldest resident, died at her home in that place.

All But 27 of the 124 Families
Notified Had Removed Today

15 GET TILL MONDAY

Remaining Dozen Mostly too
Impoverished to Go Anywhere

The problem of the U. S. Shipping Board, Housing Division, management in charge of the Harriman townsite has narrowed down to twelve families. That is to say, this number of the original 124 ordered to vacate their quarters in the shipyard village are still on the hands of the management—and are likely to remain so unless some means are found of disposing of them. Most of them are also on the hands of their charitable neighbors, for they have not money to provide themselves with food, let alone pay rent to the Government. All are very much in arrears for rent of the apartments they have been occupying since the days of shipyard activity.

Up to this morning, there were twenty-seven families of those served with the eviction notice on July 10th remaining in the quarters the Government wants to get them out of and close up. Fifteen families, however, were almost ready to vacate and had other places to go. They have been given grace until Monday.

All the remainder of the 124 have obeyed the eviction order and found other accommodations in the townsite, in Bristol, Philadelphia, and elsewhere. Quite a number of them were in arrears for rent, but those who have removed, and the fifteen of the 27 families remaining today, have adjusted their indebtedness to the satisfaction of the local management of the townsite. Some gave their notes for the unpaid rent, which the Housing Division will hold and extend liberal time for payment upon. Others have paid up the arrearsages in full.

Some who have been adjudged able to pay but who have withheld payment have been legally distressed for the arrears. Furniture belonging to one family is up for constable's sale next Tuesday to satisfy the Government's claim for rent.

The better situation townsite residents have been, all along endeavoring to do what they could to alleviate the poverty of their less fortunate fellows. A fund was created and the block party recently held added to it. This has not been more than sufficient to supply food and clothing to the distressed families and could not be made to cover their rent.

What will be done with the twelve utterly impoverished families has not been decided as yet. An endeavor will be made to solve the problem next week.

The majority of the 124 families which were occupying the central-plant-heated houses from which the Government notified them to remove have established themselves in other houses in the townsite which have individual heating plants; viz. heaters in their cellars. The Government's decision that the central heating plant was to be closed, as an absolutely necessary economy, was the original inspiration of the eviction order.

Edward F. Baldwin, who lately assumed the vacant management of the townsite, is said to have decided that the rent arrearsages and central heating plant situation must be cleaned up completely. He has, it is understood, operated on that line, making the best adjustments possible for the impoverished tenants and for the Government.

The husband and father of one of the twelve destitute families today indicated that he intended to let the Government do whatever it wanted with him and his family, as he was at the absolute end of his resources and without employment. He exhibited seven cents as his total worldly wealth.

"How can I move and where can I go on that?" he asked. "There's but one answer. I won't go. I'll stay in this apartment. The Government can shut off water, light and leave me without heat, but I can't move."

The heating plant will positively not be operated, the townsite management said today.

Bonner Needs Aeroplane

Ed Bonner, who is painting the smokestack at Ledoux's mill, was very sorry to hear that Clarence Winter's flying boat had been wrecked by the storm, as he intended trying to borrow it, to use on his job.

Congressman Adam M. Wyant has induced Glenn F. Hazlett, of Latrobe, for a vacancy at the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

The last will and testament of the Grand Army of the Republic will be drafted this week at the annual encampment in Indianapolis. The document will be in the form of resolutions, which will be offered by Frank M. Sterrett of Troy, O., and it will provide for the disposition of all the properties of the order after the last survivors have departed from the realm of eternal rest and peace.

It is an anomaly of the Civil War that the magnanimous Lincoln, great in the simple charity of a noble soul, appears to become more human and more lovable and admirable, even more influential and majestic as the nation ages, while the fierce conflict itself, though it stands out clearly as a big drama of sorrowing hearts involved over a supreme principle, seems to be a great fixture of national progress, a bulky tangibility of yesterday and long ago. The issue and principle last on as a substantial reality; their gaunt towering figure lives as the soul of freedom, justice and devotion.

Scarcely more than two generations have elapsed since one of the greatest decisions in mankind's advancement in democracy begot the Grand Army of the Republic. Most of the preservers of the Union and proponents and defenders of emancipation were young men. In the passing years all but a few of them have gone to their rich reward. The remnant of the gallant host, silver-haired, debilitated and tottering, just before the final battle, are arranging for disbandment after the last man is gone.

These venerable members of the Grand Army of the Republic will leave in their properties and their deeds and sacrifices a heritage to their descendants which always will be an inspiration to the world. It has been a grand army.

MOST ACCIDENTS PREVENTABLE

At the annual congress of the National Safety Council in Boston the Executive Committee adopted resolutions declaring that "the 80,000 accidental deaths and millions of injuries occurring each year in the streets, in our industries, in homes and elsewhere, are a blot on our civilization." Seventy-five per cent of the industrial accidents are preventable, the resolutions stated, and the direct economic cost of accidents in industry alone exceeds $1,000,000,000 annually.

Until the safety movement was launched ten years ago, manufacturing corporations paid but scant attention to accidental death and injury. Loss of life, injury to person and damage to property were looked upon as part of the day's work. The death of a common laborer was but a trifle worse than permanent disability, and permanent disability was somewhat more annoying than a petty injury. All were too commonplace to cause worry. Other men were waiting to fill the vacant places.

Results of precautionary instruction and training soon convinced industrial operatives that it was not only humane, but economical, to systematize the safety work. And public officials saw the necessity of regulating traffic and safeguarding the people against hazard in the streets and elsewhere. Year after year the number of deaths and accidents has been reduced.

It is impossible to estimate how many lives have been spared through the safety movement, but the total no doubt runs into the hundreds of thousands. However, the great work has only begun. The next step of importance is to impress the public with the fact that ordinary care can obviate three-fourth of the deaths and accidents, and to have the public take an active part in the movement.

ESTATES ARE CHANGING HANDS

Finding the maintenance of several large country seats and city homes to be too expensive a luxury, members of the English nobility and aristocracy are selling them to social neophytes. Estates which are being disposed of to recoup the decaying fortunes of old families are heritages from the original founders of the leading houses of England.

The Duke of Portland lately told the tenants on his property, Welbeck Abbey, in Nottinghamshire, that there will be a general closing down of country seats in this or the next generation. The owners cannot afford to keep them. Among town and country realty holdings which have been sold in the past years are those of the Dukes of Devonshire, Bedford, Westminster, Rutland, Marlborough and Grafton, and Lords Port and Camden. The great estates in Ireland and Scotland are likewise changing hands, and, in many instances, are being subdivided.

The passing of the big estates is a good sign. It not only means that the aristocracy is increasing in number, as a consequence of the shifting of wealth and the rising of new families, and is ceasing to be a fixed monopoly controlled by a favored few, but it presages the decay of the last vestige of feudalism. Dispersion of wealth is beneficial to the common people, whose chances of advancement are multiplied.

FORTY-NINE PRODUCTS GROW

Whoever thinks that agriculture is not a science and a business should consider the interesting work done by John L. Cliett, a former resident of Georgia, on his farm near Prosser, Wash. He has grown forty-nine varieties of crops on his property. His achievement probably is the record for diversification. One of Mr. Cliett's surprising feats is the grafting of fruit buds to seedling sprouts, seedling buds to old trees, and one kind of fruit to another. An apple tree has produced twenty-four varieties of fruit. This scientific farmer's forty-nine crops include cotton, tobacco, peanuts, potatoes, watermelons, corn, figs, and numerous kinds of fruit.

Good soil, an active mind and interest in the work make farming a pleasure and a success. Modern agriculture is a leading science and great business.

SILENT PRAYER ON NOVEMBER 11

Quite appropriately Armistice Day will be celebrated with simple and profound solemnity this year. At the suggestion of various civic organizations President Harding intends to proclaim formally a brief period of silent prayer on November 11, to invoke divine guidance on the armament conference, in gratitude for the termination of the most horrible of all wars, and in memoriam of those who lost their lives in the conflict.

Opening the conference with the prayers of the nation will be more effective than a great display of pomp. It will remind the delegates not to trust too much in their own diplomatic prowess and vanity of station and office. It will tend to steady the general public. There would be less radicalism, less discontent, less selfishness with more widespread devotion among the high and low.

Would that the idea of celebrating Armistice Day with a silent prayer were adopted by the leading nations of the world. It should be a day of more or less solemnity; at least of solemnity of the interior soul.

LET UNCLE SAM PULL THEIR TEETH

A Diplomat of Diplomats
Third of Four Biographical Sketches of the Appointees of President Harding to act as delegates of the United States in the Disarmament Conference to meet in Washington, November 11.
By Harry L. Rogers, Staff Correspondent, I. N. S.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Charles Evans Hughes, counsel for the United States and Prosecutor in Chief in the case of the Principal Allied and Associated Powers et al vs. War, Armaments & Company, Unlimited. In some such fashion one might describe the position Secretary of State Hughes is to hold in the forthcoming "Conference on the Limitation of Armaments, in Connection with Which Pacific and Far Eastern Questions Also Will Be Discussed," which President Harding has called to convene in Washington on Armistice Day November 11.

During his long public career Hughes has earned the right to a score of imposing titles and degrees, but it is as "Counsel for the United States" that he likes best to describe his present status. And though he has tackled some tremendously important "cases" during that career, there can be no doubt that the forthcoming conference is by far the biggest job he ever undertook.

Upon the result of that conference may depend the future peace of the world, to say nothing of the possibility of saving to mankind hundreds of billions of dollars which now go to the maintenance of enormous competitive armaments. As chairman of the American delegation and potential president of the Conference, Hughes will doubtless play a stellar role and certainly will be called upon to match wits with the foremost intellects of the leading nations of the world.

Training and experience have eminently fitted him for the task. As counsel for the Stevens Gas Commission and central figure of the famous insurance investigations in New York, Hughes earned a reputation as one of the keenest and most fearless prosecutors in America; during two terms as Chief Executive of the Empire State he gained the sobriquet of "best Governor New York ever had"; as Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court he gave undoubted proof of his profound knowledge of the law, his passion for mastery of the subject at hand, his fairness and ability to take a broad, constructive view of issues which others were attempting to belaud; and as candidate for the Presidency of the United States in 1916 he showed such strength with the American people that for several days it was believed he had been elected.

Few persons had thought of Hughes as a diplomat prior to his selection by President Harding for the first post in the Cabinet. The fact remains, however, that, with the nation confronted by a score of the most difficult problems in its history, Hughes in seven months has established a practically unbroken record of diplomatic victories.

Though the Armaments Conference somewhat overshadows the other undertakings of Secretary Hughes, there are completed tasks on his list which in themselves would suffice to establish the reputation of a Secretary of State in ordinary times. Pre-eminent among these is the treaty with Germany, which has aroused the admiration of Republicans and Democrats alike.

In what may perhaps be considered the order of their importance, Hughes has opened up the whole question of mandates when it had apparently been settled contrary to the views of the United States; he has brought about intentionally or unintentionally, a suspension of decision on the question of the removal of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance; he has awakened new and immediate interest in the problem of the evacuation of Shantung and Siberia by the Japanese and reiterated with unmistakable emphasis the adherence of this nation to the policy of the "open door"; he has enabled Cuba to attain a new stability in her internal affairs, thereby averting the necessity of American intervention; he has given the United States representation on the Allied Supreme Council, the Council of Ambassadors and the Reparations Commission; he has achieved a peaceful settlement of the long standing boundary dispute between Panama and Costa Rica, thereby adding greatly, his proponents believe to the prestige of the United States throughout Latin America; and he has taken a long stride in the direction of greater autonomy for the Dominican Republic and the consequent withdrawal of the American forces of occupation.

Other important matters are "still in the works" as Mr. Hughes himself likes to put it.

President Harding has stated that Secretary Hughes will be chairman of the American delegation. If precedents are followed he will also be president of the Conference, for that honor ordinarily is accorded to the inviting nation. This means Secretary Hughes will preside at the sessions of the conference and, by reason of the initiative expected of him in his capacity of president, will have an important, if not dominating, influence over the gathering. What manner of man is it then upon whose wisdom and judgment so much depends?

In appearance Hughes is impressive. You may be ignorant of the fact that he was twice Governor of a great State, a Supreme Court Justice, and that for twenty-four hours practically the whole world believed him to have been chosen President of the United States, but you would be entirely certain that you were in the presence of no ordinary man.

This impression is due solely to the strength of his personality, for Hughes has none of the trappings of greatness. Contrary to the belief which until recently had wide prevalence, he is affable, with a good humored smile which shows white, even teeth. Despite his fifty-nine years, Hughes gives the impression of great strength and vitality. He is a big man, nearly six feet tall and weighing in the neighborhood of 190 pounds. His hair, which is thinning in front, is gray but the general appearance, heightened by unusual mental and physical alertness, is that of a man of early middle age.

Over-Estimate Themselves.
Most of those who claim that the world owes them a living are inclined to insist on living high.

But on the deck of the Sausalito steamer, dreaming in the sunshine of the soft, lazy autumn day, her heart turned sick with longing once more. All was forgotten, everything was forgotten except Peter. His voice, his tall figure, erect, yet moving with the little limp she knew so well, came to her thoughts. She thought of herself on the other steamer, only an hour from now, safe in his care, Martin forgotten, and all the perplexities and disappointments of the old life forgotten, in the flood of new security and joy. Los Angeles—New Orleans—France—it mattered not where they wandered; they might well lose the world, and the world them, from today on.

"So that is to be my life—one of the blamed and ignored women?" Cherry mused, leaning on the rail and watching the plunge of the receding water. "Like the heroines of half the books—only it always seemed so bold and so frightful in books! But to me it just seems the most natural thing in all the world. I love Peter, and he loves me, and the earth is big enough to hide us, and that's all there is to it. Anyway, right or wrong, I can't help it," she finished, rejoicing to find herself suddenly serene and confident.

It was twenty minutes past ten, a warm, sweet morning, with great hurrying back and forth at the ferry, women climbing to the open seats of the cable cars, pinning on their violets or roses as they climbed. Cherry sped through it all, beside herself now with excitement and strain, only anxious to have the great hands of the clock drop more speedily from minute to minute, and so round out the terrible hour that joined the old life to the new. She was hurrying blindly toward the dock of the Los Angeles line, absorbed in her one whirling thought, when somebody touched her arm, and a voice, terrifyingly unexpected and yet familiar, addressed her, and a hand was laid on her arm.

In utter confusion she looked up. It was Martin who stopped her. For a few dreadful seconds a sort of vertigo seized Cherry as she was unable to collect her thoughts or to speak even the most casual words of greeting. She had been so full of her extraordinary errand that she was bewildered and sick at its interruption; her heart thundered, her throat was choked, and her knees shook beneath her. Where was she—what was known—how much had she betrayed—

Gaspings, trying to smile, she looked up at him, while the ferry place whirled about her and pulses drummed in her ears. She had automatically given him her hand; now he kissed her.

"Hello, Cherry; where you going?" for the third time.

"I came into town to shop," she faltered.

"You what?" She had not really been intelligible, and she felt it, with a pang of fright. He must not suspect—the steamer was there, only a short block away; Peter might pass them; a chance word might be fatal—he must not suspect—

"I'm shopping!" she said distinctly, with dry lips. And she managed, to smile.

"Well," Martin said, "surprised to see me?"

"Oh, Martin—" said her fluttered voice. Even in the utter panic of heart and soul she knew that for safety's sake she must find his vanity.

"I'm going to tell you something that will surprise you," he said. "I'm through with the Red Creek people!"

"Martin!" Cherry enunciated almost voicelessly. She looked from a flower vendor to a newsboy, looked at the cars, the people—she must not faint. She must not faint.

"Well—but where are you going? Home?"

"I was going to the dentist a minute, but it's not important." They had turned and were walking across to the ferry. She knew that there was no way in which she might escape him. "What did you say?" she said.

"I asked you when the next boat left for Mill Valley?"

"We can—go—find out." Cherry's thoughts were spinning. She must warn Peter somehow. It was twenty minutes of eleven by the ferry clock. Twenty minutes of eleven. In twenty minutes the boat would sail. She thought desperately of the women's waiting room upstairs; she might plead the necessity of telephoning from it. But it had but one door, and Martin would wait at that door.

Suddenly she realized that her only hope of warning Peter was to send a messenger. But if Martin should chance to connect her neighborhood with the boat, when he met her, and her sending of a message to Peter here—

"I think there's a boat at eleven something," she said, collectively. "Suppose you go and find out?"

She glanced toward the entrance of the Sausalito waiting-room, a hundred yards away, and a mad hope leaped in her heart. If he turned his back on her—

"What are you going to do?" he asked, somewhat surprised.

"I ought to telephone Alix!" Her despair lent her wit. If he went to the ticket office, and she into a telephone booth, she might escape him yet! While he dawdled here, minutes were flying, and Peter was watching every car and every passer-by, torn with the same agony that was tearing her. "If you'll go find out the exact time and get tickets," she said, "I'll telephone Alix."

"Tickets?" he echoed, with all Martin's old, maddening slowness. "Haven't you got a return ticket?"

"I have mileage!" she blundered.

"Oh, then I'll use your mileage!" Martin said. "Telephone," he added, nodding toward a row of booths, "no hurry; we've got piles of time!"

She remembered that he liked a masculine assumption of easiness where all trains, tickets, railroad connections, and transit business of any sort were concerned. He liked to loiter elaborately while other people were running, liked to pull out his big watch and assure her that they had all the time in the world. She tried to call a number, left the booth, paid a staring girl, and rejoined him.

"Busy!" she reported.

"I was just thinking," Martin said, "that we might stay in town and go to the Orpheum; how about it? Do we have to have Peter and Alix?"

Cherry flushed, angered again, in the well-remembered way, under all her fright and stir. Her voice had its old bored note.

"Well, Martin, I've been their guest for two months!"

"I'd just as soon have them!" Martin conceded, indifferently.

But the diverted thought had helped Cherry, irritation had nerved her, and the reminder of Martin's old, trying stupidities had lessened her fear of him.

Bibel Student Lecture
Promises Everlasting Life

The first lecture in Bristol of the International Bible Students Association of Philadelphia was given last Sunday at Trades Hall. The lecturer—William D. Haenger, of Philadelphia used the advertised topic "Millions Now Living Will Never Die". He said in part:

"If the possibilities of dying can be eliminated the peoples who would pass through this period and live beyond, would of necessity, never die. Death being a condition, it would be necessary to not only prevent people from dying, but to bring from the graves those who are now in them. If we could find in earth's history the point when this would be true, then we could apply our topic. All Christians agree that the resurrection of the dead is to be the first great work when Christ returns the second time."

Justice Taft Opens High Court Monday

Long List of Important Cases
To Be Heard By Supreme Tribunal

MEMORIAL TO WHITE

BY A. O. HAYWARD
Staff Correspondent I. N. S.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—William Howard Taft, the next chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States will open the 1921-22 term of the court here on Monday.

Chief Justice Taft succeeds in office the late Edward Douglas White, of Louisiana, who died last May. Two months later President Harding appointed Taft to the vacancy, the third Ohioan to become Chief Justice. The appointment was confirmed immediately by the Senate, but owing to the close of the last term of court and the adjournment over the summer months Chief Justice Taft has never presided over the court.

Early in the approaching term of court memorial services will be held for the late Chief Justice White. The Supreme Court will appoint a day for the services. Members of the Supreme Court bar and of the American Bar Association will eulogize Chief Justice White and responses will be made by the new Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court.

The present Supreme Court term will open with about 575 cases on its docket. During the term the docketed cases are expected to reach about 900 if the business of the court does not fall behind the record during recent years. The death of Chief Justice White during the latter part of the last term resulted in restoration to the docket of a large number of cases, argued at the last term for reargument. During the recess of the court there have been few cases of nation-wide importance brought up to the Supreme Court for review.

Business coming before the Supreme Court at the approaching term will be varied in nature, wide in scope and of great general importance to the country. Labor is interested vitally in decision of a case which involves liability of labor unions as such to pecuniary damages resulting from or growing out of strikes authorized and participated in by labor unions and their members. Lower Federal courts for Arkansas have held a union liable in damages.

The legality of the use of the taxing power vested in Congress to restrain or prohibit child labor in factory, mine and mills is to be determined by the court in a case brought from the cotton mills of the South.

The Government is interested in decisions involving the validity of the "open competition" plan of price-fixing, which it is opposing and in various tax cases in which large revenues are involved.

Constitutionality of many State laws is challenged in appeals brought to the Supreme Court, including the Industrial Court law of Kansas, the Housing laws of New York and the School Vaccine laws of Texas.

English And Irish People Pleased With Situation

BY CHARLES WRAY
Staff Correspondent I. N. S.
LONDON, Oct. 1.—Government circles and the press of both England and Ireland regarded with complete satisfaction today the reply of Eamonn de Valera to Premier Lloyd George, accepting the Premier's peace conference invitation. The feeling prevailed that both sides are now showing a sincere desire to "explore every avenue in an effort to solve the easiest Irish trouble."

Officials of the Irish office, however, warned the people against the expectation of speedy results. Both sides are expected to move cautiously.

To Be Done With Discretion.

Schoolgirls Accuse Well Known Upper-County Pair

Two hitherto esteemed citizens of Bucks County have become involved in some more trouble. Arrested several months ago on charges growing out of the robbery of summer bungalows, Walter Buckman, a prominent farmer and school director, and David Ryan, proprietor of a dance casino at Washington's Crossing, are again under arrest, this time through charges made by four schoolgirls. The girls, all of in their early teens, say they were attacked.

The State police say that a blackmail charge may also be lodged against Ryan, to the effect that he tried to extort money from Buckman.

The girls are Elizabeth Lodge, Stella Vannest, Frances Wall and Lucille McKenney. The latter, aged 13, was employed by Ryan at his Washington's Crossing place.

Ryan is a married man with a six-year-old son. Persons in the community are up in arms.

Ryan was taken to the Bucks County Prison on Thursday night. He will be held without a hearing, but may secure bail and be released until the time of his trial.

Buckman, who was a former director of the Taylorsville school, had been missing from home for several days, according to the police. Later he surrendered himself at Morrisville and was given a hearing before Judge Ryan. Buckman, whose wife died several years ago, lives on a big farm at Washington's Crossing with his daughter.

Corporal W. A. Banks, in charge of the Pennsylvania state police at Langhorne, made the arrests.

Police Ban Parking On Road In Rear Of Theatre

Complaints of the obstruction of the roadway which leads from Mill street down to Maple Beach, and from the property owners thereabout, has caused the police to place "No Parking" signs along side the Forrest Theatre. Auto owners who have been leaving their cars in this space while attending the performances at the theatre or shopping along Mill street will have to stop the practice.

The Maple Beach residents who use the roadway leading over the bridge of the old line of the railroad have complained that the parked cars are sometimes so thick that they cannot get through. Fear of a blocking up of the road by these parked cars when a fire occurred at Maple Beach has also prompted police action.

Would Be Worth Seeing.

In the geometry class a difficult problem arose. The teacher informed the pupils that he would put it on the blackboard and explain it. After carefully and tediously working on the diagram he addressed the class thus: "I want every one in this class to watch the blackboard now as I run through it."

Resurrection of the Dead Soon

Judge Rutherford

The terrible world war and subsequent epidemics of 1914-1919, the present ouija-board craze, and the recent granting of a national home land to the Jews, were all clearly marked out in the same prophecies which now distinctly declare when the resurrection will begin.

We all could easily believe this statement or declaration if the time were announced to begin say two or three hundred years future, but to apply it to ourselves requires positive knowledge based upon indisputable evidence. Thousands of profound Bible scholars can prove from Bible prophecies which have been fulfilled during the past five years that those living until the year 1925 can live forever if they choose to do so.

All Interested and Desiring to Hear and Consider definite Scripture proof for this proclamation are cordially invited to attend the free lecture given by
